Title: NORJAK;
CAA-HIJACKING

Synopsis: To submit evidence for DNA analysis.

Package Copy: Being forwarded under separate cover is one original airline ticket (1B21) and one snap on black tie with gold tie clip (1B7).

Enclosures: Original Laboratory reports regarding above items.

Details: As the Laboratory is aware, captioned case involves the hijacking of Northwest flight 305 destined for Seattle on 11/24/1971 by an unknown subject. In spite of exhaustive investigation over the years, the subject remains unidentified. This case has national significance and remains the only unresolved airplane hijacking in U.S. history. As this was a capital offense at the time, no statute of limitation exists. Retrieval of any DNA could be very useful as a DNA profile could be used to eliminate subjects that are still being brought to the attention of Seattle

The above items were originally submitted to the Laboratory in late 1971 for fingerprint analysis (ticket) and manufacture analysis (tie and clip) with negative results. No DNA testing was ever done. Prior reports from the LAB related to the examination of the tie and clip are attached for reference. As these are the only items absolutely known to have been handled by the UNSUB in this case, they are being resubmitted at this time for DNA analysis. If appropriate, and following the DNA work, the ticket (1B21) should be also resubmitted for latents.

NORJAK

Enclosed herewith for the Laboratory is the man's narrow black necktie with attached tie clip which was found by Las Vegas Agents in hijacked aircraft in this matter and which was believed worn by Unsub.

Enclosures have been displayed to J.C. Penney Co., store personnel at Las Vegas, Nevada, and Portland, Oregon. All personnel contacted uniformly agree that the tie, which bore the "Towncraft" label, exclusive with Penney's, could not have been sold at any time in the recent past. At Las Vegas, the most recent sales of such ties were estimated at one and one-half years ago, and at Portland, three years ago. None of the persons contacted were able to offer any suggestions as to how the purchaser of the tie might possibly be traced.

REQUEST OF THE BUREAU

FBI LABORATORY

Enclosure should be examined to determine whether it bears any traces of identifiable body secretions, hairs, stains, etc., which may be of help in this investigation. Upon conclusion of the examination, enclosure should be forwarded to Seattle by registered mail.

Synopsis: To enclose letter and set lead at Bossier City, Louisiana.

Enclosure(s): Case synopsis and letter received from Bossier City Attorney [redacted]

b6

Details: Captioned case is described in the enclosed synopsis. It remains the only unresolved hijacking in U.S. history. Recently a letter was received in Seattle from Bossier City, Louisiana Attorney [redacted] advised he was contacted by an individual who could identify the subject in this case who used the alias DAN COOPER at the time of the hijacking. [redacted] inquired as to the existence of a reward for this information.

New Orleans should be aware that many people who contact Seattle have studied media accounts of this crime over the years and may base their 'knowledge' on these accounts, which are frequently in error. This case has appeared on the Discovery Channel again recently and is continually rerun on Unsolved Mysteries. Seattle filters these responses based on a process developed over the years, and sets relatively few investigative leads. Due to this offense being a capital crime in 1971, DOJ has advised no statute of limitations exists. In addition, a 'John Doe' indictment was returned in 1976.

Any information of significance that leads to the identification of the UNSUB, aka DAN COOPER, could result in the CAA - HIJACKINGARMED AND DANGEROUS*Synopsis: To outline a three phase investigative plan concerning evaluation of recent DNA profile.Details: Over thirty years, more than one thousand possible subjects have been processed by Seattle with the assistance of virtually every Field Division. Most were quickly eliminated, some required extensive investigation to eliminate, while some remained of interest and could not be included or excluded through normal means. To date, the hijacker of Northwest 305, who parachuted from the aircraft in southern Washington on 11/24/1971 with the $200,000 ransom, has not been identified. As airplane hijacking was a capital offense at the time, DOJ has recently advised that no statute of limitations exists. This remains the only unresolved hijacking in U.S. history.

During 2001, advancements in sensitivity of DNA PCR/STR testing reached a point that resubmission of an item believed handled and worn by the UNSUB in this case was deemed worthwhile. Recently, SA [redacted] was advised that testing of this item (a black necktie) has resulted in recovery of male nuclear DNA, which has been deemed suitable for entry into CODIS. The subject was observed wearing this item during the hijacking, which he apparently removed before exiting the airplane. The DNA examiner has stated that the DNA recovered likely belongs to the subject or owner.

To: Seattle From: Seattle
Re: SE 164A-81, 08/20/2002

Due passage of time, and the sheer number of subjects evaluated in this case, special considerations are necessary to effectively use these DNA results without generating large numbers of time intensive leads. The following is a three phase investigative plan that will be completed in the next 30-60 days:

1. Laboratory, DNA1, has been requested to submit the CODIS profile to all 50 states for checking against State DNA databases. Special attention will be provided to databases in Oregon and Washington.

2. A comprehensive review of each subject subfile (1,057 currently) will be conducted to identify those not strongly eliminated at the time.

3. From those identified in phase two, leads will be set to obtain DNA samples from the suspect, subjects children, or other appropriate personal items belonging to him. The intent is to be very selective with these leads.

It is anticipated that some of those contacted in phase three will contact the media. Receiving offices will be instructed to refer any media inquiries to the Seattle media coordinator. The specific source of the recovered DNA will not be discussed.

D.B. Cooper case still cold after 30 years

FBI keeps getting tips but most are filed away

SEATTLE (AP) — It was 30 years ago Saturday that D.B. Cooper jumped from a hijacked, Seattle-bound jetliner with $200,000 in ransom money strapped to his waist, never to be heard from again.

His escapade remains the only unsolved skyjacking in the United States. The FBI has received thousands of tips, but investigators have nothing to go on.

There's no suspect, no leads — and nothing to prove who Cooper was, or where he went.

"He's our Jesse James and Billy the Kid," said Jerry Thomas of Jefferson County. Thomas is a retired Army infantryman who has searched the backwoods of Southwest Washington for any trace of Cooper.

Cooper apparently parachuted somewhere over Cowlitz or Clark counties. He's beaten the best crime fighters in the country, earning him folk hero status among some.

On Saturday, the tiny town of Ariel will throw a party for Cooper for the 27th straight year at the Ariel Store, the town's main bar.

Cooper's case inspired some copycat attempts and prompted new airport security measures nationwide.

"It's with me," said Ralph Himmelsbach, the FBI agent who worked the case for eight years before retiring. "I don't lose any sleep over it, but if I had my druthers, it would be solved."

In a book he wrote about the case, Himmelsbach says, "Here's a little guy all by himself who reached up and tweaked Uncle Sam's nose and took $200,000 from a major corporation."

Many who have studied Cooper's actions of Thanksgiving Eve 1971 are certain he died trying to escape. They have reason to believe that, too. The weather was bad with heavy rain; Cooper jumped over a dense forest of pine and Douglas fir; he was dressed in a suit and loafers; and one of the two parachutes he used was defective.

But his story is fascinating.

On Nov. 24, 1971, a thin man in his 40s calling himself Dan Cooper showed up at the Northwest Orient Airlines ticket counter at Portland International Airport. He paid $20 cash for a one-way flight to Seattle departing at 4:35 p.m. He then waited 50 minutes to board the Boeing 727. He took a seat near the back of the plane, and had the row to himself.

Soon after takeoff, Cooper handed a note to a stewardess and said he had a bomb on board. He let her peak into his briefcase at wires and red sticks that seemed to be explosives. He then demanded $200,000, four parachutes and "no funny stuff." At 5:40 p.m., the plane landed at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport and authorities met his demands.

Then, he ordered the plane back into the air and to fly toward Mexico via Reno at no more than 10,000 feet. He later jumped, and hasn't been seen or heard from since.

"The fact that it's the only unsolved hijacking keeps it high-profile," said FBI agent Ralph Hope of Seattle, the latest agent in charge of the case. "It will remain that way until we know the individual could not be alive."

In 1971 and 1980, the FBI searched for Cooper, looking into countless leads with no luck. About six inquiries still come in to agents each month, but most are just filed away.

No Trace of Skyjacker's Parachutes

WOODLAND, Wash. (AP)

— Authorities hiked through rural woodlands, seeking traces of a parachuting airline hijacker for the third day Saturday. But again they reported no clues.

The hijacker is believed to have bailed out over the 15-square-mile search area Wednesday night after hijacking the Northwest Airlines jet at Seattle. He had demanded and received four parachutes and $200,000 ransom.

"We're concentrating our search for a parachute," said Tom Manning, FBI agent co-ordinating the search. "We think this will give us a clue as to what happened to the hijacker."

"We've determined the hijacker was wearing a sport-type back pack parachute," Manning said. "That means it would be difficult for him to maneuver if he had any kind of bulk on him at all and we've been told $200,000 weighs over 20 pounds."

Authorities earlier said the ransom, largest ever paid a hijacker in the United States, was in $20 bills.

D.B. Cooper puzzle: The legend turns 30

By Susan Gilmore
 Seattle Times staff reporter

If you believe a persuasive San Diego cabdriver, D.B. Cooper was a drifter and card player who died of a cocaine overdose in California 15 years after skyjacking a Northwest Airlines jet between Portland and Seattle.

If you believe an equally insistent Florida realtor, D.B. Cooper was her late husband, a chain-smoking ex-con who revealed his true identity to her six years ago as he lay dying of kidney disease in a Pensacola hospital.

And if you believe the FBI, the notorious skyjacker, after parachuting out of the plane at 10,000 feet with a 21-pound satchel of ransom money strapped to his chest, died in the jump. No matter that his body has never been found.

Three decades later, the only unsolved skyjacking in the country's history continues to fascinate mystery lovers, with many hoping the passenger known as D.B. Cooper — who physically hurt no one, except possibly himself — landed safely with the loot and got away.

"He's our Jesse James and Billy the Kid," said Jerry Thomas of Jefferson County, a retired Army infantryman who has made it his mission to scour the backwoods of Southwest Washington for any sign of Cooper.

Even law-abiding Americans have a history of rooting for the underdog, and "here's a little guy all by himself who reached up and tweaked Uncle Sam's nose and took $200,000 from a major corporation" and may have gotten away with it, said retired FBI Agent Ralph Himmelsbach, who spent years searching for Cooper and wrote a book about the case.

It almost doesn't matter if Cooper is dead; for 30 years, his legend has lived on.

A leap into history

On Nov. 24, 1971, a tall, dark-complexioned passenger identifying himself as Dan Cooper hijacked a Boeing 727 on a stormy Thanksgiving Eve, demanded and got $200,000 and parachutes, then jumped from the rear of the plane into history.

In recent weeks, as the anniversary has approached, television crews from around the world have descended on Thomas, a self-appointed Cooper expert, for his stories and a walk through the woods where Cooper is believed to have landed. Maybe, just maybe, Thomas would find a scrap of parachute, a human bone, a waterlogged $20 bill.

Officially, the case remains open.

"The fact it's the only unsolved hijacking keeps it high-profile," said FBI Agent Ralph Hope of Seattle, the latest in a list of agents in charge of the case. "It will remain that way until we know the individual could not be alive."

Though the FBI conducted major searches in 1971 and 1980, collected 1,200 files and checked out countless leads, no hard evidence ever turned up. Agents still receive a half-dozen inquiries a month; most are simply filed away.

"There's a number of incidents where people looked very, very good, but no direct evidence was located," Hope said. "Many will read articles or books and call in with information, much of it inaccurate. You can almost tell what books they read."

'I have a bomb'

Agents knew little about the skyjacker except that he smoked Raleigh cigarettes, drank whiskey, was familiar with aerodynamics and paid $20 cash for a one-way flight from Portland to Seattle.

He wore a dark suit and tie, white shirt and pearl tie tack, and had short, dark hair. He carried a briefcase and dark raincoat, and took seat 18C on Flight 305, having the row to himself.

The jet was barely in the air before he passed a note to a flight attendant, who slipped it unopened into a pocket. Cooper leaned closer: "Miss, you'd better look at that note. I have a bomb." He opened his briefcase to reveal several red cylinders and a nest of wires.

FBI HANDBOUT
Hijacker D.B. Cooper, in FBI sketches from 1971 and showing how he might look today.

The plane landed in Seattle; passengers were exchanged for parachutes and ransom money paid by the airline. With Cooper and the flight crew on board, it took off, heading south toward Mexico. About 30 minutes later, a cockpit warning light showed the rear stairway was fully extended. The pilot asked over the intercom, "Is everything OK back there?"

Cooper yelled back, "No," and bailed out the back into freezing darkness.

The plane landed in Reno, where agents found nothing except Cooper's skinny black tie, tie tack, eight of his cigarette butts, two of the parachutes and possibly a fingerprint among the 66 never identified.

Did he survive? Said Hope: "We know there was a blowing storm, the plane was going 170 knots, he was wearing street clothes and street shoes. ... The chance of survival was not good. Possible, not likely."

Yet Cooper's body was never found, and only a portion of the ransom money — whose serial numbers the FBI had recorded — turned up when a child digging in a sand bar on the north bank of the Columbia River west of Vancouver in 1980 unearthed a bundle of $20 bills.

That gives romantics room to fantasize that Cooper is alive, enjoying his riches in some exotic locale.

But the San Diego cabbie and the Florida realtor have no doubts. Not only are they certain Cooper survived the jump, they insist they know who he was.

The cabbie's tale

The two men were poker-playing buddies. Sitting in a bar one night in 1984, Rizzo said, he confided to Huddleston that he was a fugitive wanted by the FBI for counterfeiting.

Huddleston replied with his own confession: He had skyjacked an airplane in 1971.

Rizzo said he kept the secret until after Huddleston died in 1986 of an aneurysm brought on by a cocaine overdose at age 52. Rizzo told the FBI his tale. An autopsy of Huddleston revealed his legs were covered with scars, which Rizzo says were caused by the jump from the plane.

Rizzo said Huddleston gave him this account:

After plunging from the plane, he landed near a river, in a tree about 10 feet above the ground, where a sharp limb punctured his knee and ribs. The weather was so bad his shoes blew off, and ice and sleet coated his arms and back.

The strap that held the money tore, and that's how he lost the packet later found by the child on the riverbank. He crawled to a cave and later hitchhiked to Portland, where he spent months recuperating before eventually moving to San Diego.

He hid the money until 1978, when he took it to an Indian reservation in Montana to be laundered. When he returned to San Diego, he kept it stashed in the taillight of an old Cadillac.

Because he was constantly fearful of running into someone from the flight who would recognize him, he often changed his appearance, growing a beard and shaving his head, then growing a mustache and wearing a long ponytail.

Rizzo said Huddleston once said: "In the back of my mind, one day I'll be sitting on a bus, in a bar, and look into the face of the only person who could identify me. I'll see that stewardess. I know she will never forget my face."

Huddleston told Rizzo he'd bought the airline ticket under the name Don — his real middle name, not Dan — and was amused that the FBI went searching for a Dan Cooper.

"He was a James Dean type, a daredevil," Rizzo said. "This is not a story I could make up, but the FBI's never going to prove it."

The real-estate agent's tale

She claims she found the remote spot near Battle Ground, Clark County, where her husband, an insurance salesman and ex-con, took her in 1979. At the time, all he told her was that it was a sentimental journey for him.

It wasn't until 1995, when he was 70 and on his deathbed, that he whispered to her, "I'm Dan Cooper."

Jo Weber had no idea what he meant, and he angrily blurted, "Oh, let it die with me."

She has since uncovered a trail of stories, suppositions and what could just be coincidences. Among them:

Composite sketches of Cooper resemble her husband, who was a chain smoker. Because he'd served time for burglary and forgery on McNeil Island when it housed a federal penitentiary, he was familiar with the general area where Cooper is believed to have landed.

He sometimes talked in his sleep, drenched in sweat. "I left my fingerprints on the aft stairs," he mumbled. "I'm going to die."

When she asked him about it later, he was vague and evasive.

Jo Weber once found an old airline ticket from Portland to Seattle in a box of records. She came across it a second time when she was cleaning out clothes, but her husband said it didn't mean anything, and the ticket got lost again.

"I've offered to do anything I have to to prove I'm telling the truth," she said. "Now, I have to let God take care of the rest. I've given it five years of my life ... but I'm not going to use up the rest of my life trying to do the FBI's job for them."

Investigations 'just burn out'

The FBI has investigated a litany of stories like those from Rizzo and Weber but rejected them because there is simply no proof, Hope said. Except for the sodden bills along the Columbia, the forests have held Cooper's secret.

"Every so often one would come along, and I'd get the rush of adrenaline," said Himmelsbach, the retired FBI agent and author. "There's a guy in a bar with a bunch of $20 bills, he's limping on one leg and someone asks where he got the roll, and he says he might of hijacked an airplane. You track those things down, and they just burn out."

Another who discounts Weber's deathbed confession is Thomas, the retired Army infantryman who has spent the past three decades searching the thick forests of Southwest Washington for signs of Cooper.

"There's no way," said Thomas, 50, a survival expert. "... A lot of what (Jo Weber) is claiming came right out of a book."

Thomas pulls out a well-worn map and traces the forests around Washougal, Clark County. This, he believes, is where Cooper's remains rest.

But he is willing to entertain the notion that Cooper survived, so he walks the woods, sometimes with his grandchildren, searching for signs under branches and along creek banks.

"Unsolved cases really intrigue me. This is my life," Thomas said.

Some clues still kept secret

When Cooper commandeered the Northwest jet, skyjacking was hardly a novel crime. More than 25 were attempted in 1971 alone, but he alone did not get caught.

The following year, screening devices became mandatory in airports, and Himmelsbach said exit doors on airliners were modified with a device named the Cooper Vane so they could not be opened in midflight.

The FBI won't talk about suspects in an open case. But agents say they have kept some of their clues secret in hopes of someday solving the mystery. "There's stuff we know nobody else knows," Hope said.

The small town of Ariel, Cowlitz County, where some think Cooper landed, hosts an annual Cooper celebration; this year there will be no one parachuting from the sky because of security concerns over a nearby dam. After 30 years, the event still draws a crowd.

"It's that desperado mystique," said local historian Walt Crowley of the story's enduring fascination.

"It was an extraordinary audacious act to lower that rear gangway in flight and jump into a dark and stormy night," Crowley said. "He didn't hurt anybody ... and we all love a mystery."

Re: Hijacking of Northwest 305

Dear Special Agent [REDACTED]

I am in receipt of and thank you for your letter dated December 10, 2002, regarding the above referenced matter. The information detailed in my letter dated August 29, 2002, came to be known to my client through a mutual acquaintance with who is believed to be the hijacker of NW 305 commonly referred to in the media as "D.B. Cooper." My client has never personally spoken with "Mr. Cooper" but does believe the information which can be delivered is accurate and specific in nature to the extent that it would lead to location of "Mr. Cooper."

Again, the nature of the information known to my client is detailed in my previous letter. My client is willing to meet with representatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but has legitimate concerns regarding maintaining his confidentiality, as well as desires more meaningful and detailed discussions regarding the available reward in the event the information provided is in fact accurate and leads to the arrest of "Mr. Cooper."

With the Christmas holidays upon us, I will maintain unusual office hours at best through the end of the year. Special Agent [REDACTED] is familiar with me and has the ability to contact me as needed. Please feel free to contact me at [REDACTED] or at the above address.

With kind personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

I may have some information about the case but you probably already know it. In 1977-79 I worked for the FAA on Kodiak Island as a [REDACTED]. I also worked with the [REDACTED] at that time. His name is [REDACTED]. He told me he worked at Reno tower and was on duty when the DB Cooper plane (727) landed (rear door was open). He said the plane was not allowed to park in the normal area. He also said it was parked in a dark area. He told me that from that location anyone could have gotten off the plane after it stopped. His thought was that Mr. D.B. got off after the plane landed verse jumping. He may have been in the rest room and waited for the right time after the plane stopped. He also may have thrown some of the money out as a diversion. [REDACTED] seemed to have 1st hand knowledge since he worked at Reno as an [REDACTED] at the time. Last I heard he still lives in Kodiak but that was years back.

Dear Agent [redacted]

I am an attorney in Maine. Several years ago a client of mine came to me with evidence that [redacted] had committed a number of crimes a good many years ago. The evidence was significant but not conclusive, so I began a private investigation in conjunction with some forensic experts and a private investigator from one of the major investigative agencies in the country. We have proceeded cautiously, not only because of possible danger to my client, but also to protect the reputation of the man in question, in case we are mistaken. (The man is well respected and has no criminal record.)

Some time after beginning our investigation, a new and unexpected development occurred. We learned of evidence pointing to the possibility that the man in question may have committed another crime, one unconnected to any of those we had been investigating. This was the famous (or infamous) D. B. Cooper skyjacking.

Let me say right off that we view this possibility as a long shot. We do not have any evidence directly connecting him to the skyjacking. Nevertheless, there are a number of factors that make us believe he is a bona fide suspect. I will summarize some of them for you on the pages accompany this letter, where we refer to the man in question simply as "X." Again, this summary is not intended to prove that our suspect committed the skyjacking, but simply to demonstrate that he bears further investigation.

When this possibility first came to our attention, we reviewed all the information available to the public on the case. We then made some efforts to locate [redacted] the flight attendant who had a good deal of contact with Cooper during the skyjacking. When we were unable to do so (the last we were able to learn was that she had left a [redacted] in Oregon), we let our efforts on the case lapse and returned to our original concerns. It seemed to us that even if our suspect were guilty of the skyjacking, our chances of arriving at any definite conclusion were remote.

DB Cooper-21698

Recently, however, we learned that there may be DNA-related evidence in the Cooper case. We should have thought of this before, as certain objects that Cooper came in close contact with (such as a glass he drank from and cigarettes he smoked) could still be kept in an evidence room. In recent years quite a few old crimes have been solved with the aid of DNA technology. And in fact, since the other crimes we were investigating were also old crimes, we had made the effort to obtain DNA material from our suspect, without his being aware of it. From my client, we obtained some handkerchiefs with the man's blood on them and have had both nuclear and mitochondrial profiles done by a private lab, Orchid Cellmark. We also have a full set of the man's fingerprints.

I then contacted [redacted] whose book we had read. I discussed the case with him, and asked him if it was possible that there was DNA evidence in the Cooper case, and he said he thought there was. This was vital to me, as I don't think it would be possible to prove or disprove our suspect's guilt on any other basis than hard physical evidence. I don't want to waste my time or yours pursuing mere theories or possibilities.

[redacted] gave me your name as the case agent in the Cooper case and encouraged me to contact you. I thought I would write you first, to give you some background on this matter. I will try to contact you by phone sometime next week in the hope that we can discuss the matter further.

As mentioned, the odds that our suspect is guilty of the Cooper skyjacking are small, but nevertheless they are not negligible. With the recent developments in forensic technology, perhaps we have a real possibility of resolving this case. I look forward to going into the matter further with you.

Sincerely,

[redacted]

Reasons To Suspect "X" in the Cooper Skyjacking

Appearance

X's physical appearance (height, weight, age, facial appearance) is compatible with eyewitness descriptions and the composite sketches. For example, he was [redacted] in 1971, but looked somewhat older (in their 30s, some men still look boyish, others look middle-aged; in his 30s, X was generally mistaken for being older than his actual age). Again, X was bald across the top of the head, but a simple hairpiece would have enabled him to look as described (and in fact, since Cooper was a careful planner, and knew he would be seen by many people, including a stewardess who would observe him up close, he would probably have taken some precaution, in addition to sunglasses, to alter his appearance).

b6

Behavior

Cooper's behavior has been described as cool and calm, and also (when it was necessary) as commanding and authoritative. But in the latter case, he was firm and polite rather than abusive (one of the stewardesses said he was more of a gentleman than many regular passengers she had encountered). He became impatient at times, but only (and only to the extent) that it was appropriate under the circumstances to get his way. In short, he was in full control of himself in very difficult circumstances.

X is very self-disciplined. Both in the military and in civilian life he was used to being in command and directing other people in order to accomplish missions or projects. When he was in the military, a colonel who headed a high-pressure unit once remarked publicly that of all the people he had known in the military, X was the only one who never became rattled in a crisis.

Also, as a leader and by personal temperament, X is a very careful and thorough planner, one who thinks through all the angles and contingencies of any project he leads or undertakes. But unlike some people, who are strong at planning but not at acting, X can be very bold and decisive in action. He has always had a strong interest in physical activities that involve risk, for example, hang-gliding, whitewater kayaking (in the [redacted] in Idaho), [redacted]

[redacted] because of its dangers). He is bold and in a quiet way something of a show-off, but never reckless. He takes chances, but only well-calculated ones.

Background and Skills

Although he was not a career military officer, X served in the military -- in the Air Force -- during the [redacted]. He was familiar with Boeing 727s, with their rear steps that could be lowered from the inside, as these were used in Vietnam at the time he was in the Air Force.

X learned to fly when he was in the Air Force, and ever since then he has had a private pilot's license and has continued to fly.

X learned to fly when he was at [redacted] in northern California, and would have been familiar with other bases on the West Coast (such as McChord near Seattle). He had visited Portland, and in flying would have used aviation maps of the region. Thus, the whole locale of the skyjacking would have been familiar to him, not only personally but technically.

X did not take parachute training or jump when he was in the Air Force, but later in civilian life (still in the 1960s) he learned to skydive and became proficient at it (as he does in most things he undertakes).

X became familiar with the woods when he was a young boy. He did a lot of long-distance hiking with his father in rugged terrain (the Smoky Mountains). Later, after being an Eagle Scout, he was accepted into a little-known, more advanced Scouting rank called the Order of the Arrow. (To achieve this rank, you had to undergo a wilderness survival test, in which you were given a compass, one match, and an egg, and nothing more, and were left in a remote area of the woods; you had to spend the night alone in the woods, cook the egg, and then find your way out unaided.) He has remained familiar with being in the woods ever since. He is very self-reliant.

X also has good knowledge of chemistry and explosives.

Opportunity

At this time, more than 30 years after the crime, we cannot reconstruct X's whereabouts at Thanksgiving 1971. Because we have been investigating X with regard to other unrelated crimes, we have developed an extensive time-line for him, going back to the 1960s. [redacted] is something of a pack rat and has always kept boxes of old records, so we have been able to determine X's whereabouts on a significant percentage of past dates. However, our records show nothing for the period from November 23-28, 1971.

It is worth noting, though, that X has always had a considerable amount of autonomy or freedom of movement, even though he has been both regularly employed and [redacted] since the late 1950s. His work often permits him to travel by himself (he has always made such trips at least once a month, often from one coast to another, and on these trips he is often not accountable to anyone as to his whereabouts). And despite [redacted] he has always insisted on going off occasionally on long weekend trips by himself, ostensibly to engage in one of his outdoor or wilderness sports (which [redacted] does not take part in). Thus, the four (or more) day Thanksgiving weekend in 1971 would have been a likely time for him to be away. Certainly he could have arranged to have the time free if he had wanted to do so.

Motive

At the time of the Cooper skyjacking, X was in need of money. He was employed and he earned enough for ordinary purposes, but the household operated on a budget. It had become apparent for some time to [redacted] that X was spending fairly substantial amounts of money beyond what was accounted for in the budget, using various dodges to take the money from other budgeted expenses.

b6
b7c

This money problem resulted in rising tensions between X and [redacted]. If X were engaged in some clandestine activity (of whatever nature), as almost surely he was, this increasing tension and questioning would have been seen by him as a danger. However, shortly after the Cooper skyjacking, all money problems ceased completely and never arose again.

b7c

Besides the money issue, [redacted] feels certain that if he did commit the Cooper skyjacking, that he was strongly motivated by the challenge, the thrill, and the notoriety or "achievement" that it represented. She is sure that even if he lost the money, that he would be pleased. He has always placed a high value on achieving things that are difficult and/or dangerous.

b6
b7c

How [redacted] Came To Suspect X

b6
b7C

X [redacted] but it wasn't until the early 1990s that [redacted] had any suspicion that [redacted] might have committed any crimes in the past. Even then she had no idea that he might have committed the Cooper skyjacking (a crime she had heard about, but about which she knew little, mostly only what she gathered from a movie she had seen back in the 1970s).

Then, in 1997, she read a long article about people who had mysteriously disappeared and had never been found (Jimmy Hoffa, Madlyn Murray O'Hare, etc.). One of the cases touched on in the article was D. B. Cooper. One aspect of the article interested her (not the Cooper part) and she wanted to get [redacted] reaction, so she read the article to him. When she did so, it was the part about D. B. Cooper that interested him, and he showed a surprising amount of knowledge about the case – quite detailed knowledge about a case then almost 30 years old. Since she now suspected him of having committed other crimes in the past, this got her thinking, and she quickly remembered two things.

First, back in the mid-1970s, she and [redacted] had seen a movie about D. B. Cooper. She had no particular interest in the movie, but [redacted] was eager to see it and so they went as soon as it came out. The only reason she remembers it is because of the highly unusual reaction of [redacted] to the movie. His normal personality is somewhat reserved, not much given to enthusiasm or emotional expression. But at this movie, he was on the edge of his seat, his face aglow, laughing at all the jokes. His reaction was so oversized and unusual that [redacted] remembers it much better than she does the movie. But it never entered her mind at that time that he could have committed the crime (or any crime). His reaction, taken by itself, might mean only that the movie struck a chord with him or perhaps that, unknown to her, he was a D. B. Cooper "fan."

The second thing she remembered also occurred in the mid-1970s. She and [redacted] lived in the eastern United States. During this time [redacted] announced on one occasion that he would be in California on business for a few days and afterward could drive up to Portland. He had been to Portland any number of times before, and liked the city, but she had been there only once, and then only briefly. So he suggested that she fly out to Portland to meet him, and to see the city, and then they could drive home across the U.S., making it a vacation trip.

When she flew into the Portland airport, [redacted] met her and insisted on giving her a full tour of the airport, as if it were one of the major tourist sites of the city. It was a nice enough airport, but there was nothing distinctive about it; it was much like airports in a hundred other metropolitan areas. But [redacted] was very enthusiastic about showing it to her. This, like his reaction to the movie, was so peculiar that she remembered it well, even years later. But at the time she made no connection between this and the movie or the Cooper case. It was only in 1997, when it occurred to her that he might have committed the Cooper skyjacking, that these two memories came together.

b6

As odd as these occasions were, though, she did not put much weight on them. More striking was an event that occurred on November 24, 1999. She and [redacted] had flown into Atlanta and rented a car to drive to North Carolina, for a Thanksgiving

[redacted] They had a long way to drive, but trying to get out of Atlanta proved to be a nightmare. The holiday traffic in a city like Atlanta would have been difficult at best, but it turned out that there had been a serious truck accident along their route, and traffic ground to a halt. For a long time, they could only inch along. As a result, X came to be in a really foul mood, one that threatened to spoil the whole weekend, especially as they had not been looking forward to the weekend anyway. (As [redacted]) But then something happened. The car radio was on, and without warning the news announcer suddenly said, "Do you know what tonight is? Tonight is the twenty-eighth anniversary of D. B. Cooper." He explained briefly who Cooper was and told a weak joke in tribute to him, and then went on to the day's news. Immediately X's mood changed, and changed totally, though the traffic remained horrible for some time. X immediately became very cheerful and upbeat, and he remained "up," i.e., not just in a better mood but noticeably happier than normal, not only for the rest of the drive but for the entire weekend. Though he never mentioned what had been said on the radio, it was obvious that it had triggered a radical change of mood. It also seemed that this was not the reaction of a mere "fan."

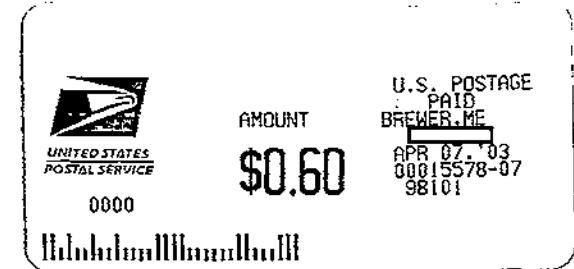

At this time [redacted] began to read about the case. Everything she read, from Cooper's behavior to the phrases and expressions he had used, reminded her forcefully of [redacted]. She also realized that he had all the skills needed to carry out the skyjacking, that he had had a motive to do so, and that he could have had the opportunity. It was only because of this -- and not because of the odd behavior of [redacted] mentioned above -- that we made an effort to locate [redacted] the stewardess who had had so much contact with Cooper during the commission of the crime. However, when we were unable to locate her, we felt our chances of getting anywhere with the case were remote, and we turned our attention back to our original concerns. Nevertheless, we remained convinced that there was a possibility that X was guilty of the skyjacking.

As far as we know, X has never come even remotely close to being looked at by the authorities, and there is no reason why he should have. He did not live in the Northwest at the time, he has no criminal record, he is steadily employed, married and well respected, his outdoors and sports activities are low profile, often carried out on his own. If he was Cooper, even his appearance would not be likely to arouse any suspicion. The composite sketch could look reasonably like a lot of people and was probably circulated mostly in the Northwest. And the addition of a hairpiece would itself make enough of a difference to allay any recognition. As a result, it is only in circumstances like the present, where someone knows the suspect intimately, that suspicion and discovery is likely to occur.

Dear Agent [redacted]

b6
b7C

I appreciated the opportunity to talk with you recently about a man I believe is a bona fide suspect in the Cooper skyjacking case.

You asked me to provide the man's military record, a photo of him about the time of the skyjacking, and a current photo, as well as his birth date and Social Security number. All of these are enclosed with this letter.

While I'm at it, let me add two or three brief comments.

First, the record that the military provided doesn't state where our suspect was assigned, except indirectly. In fact, he served his two full years at Travis Air Force Base north of San Francisco, where he worked [redacted]

b7C

Second, as mentioned, our suspect is a [redacted]. This caused us to have doubts for some time. To put it simply, we didn't think a [redacted] would commit crimes, at least major crimes unrelated to his profession. But we had good reason to suspect him in a number of cases, so we contacted [redacted] who once worked in the FBI's profiling unit at Quantico. [redacted] assured us, on the basis of his knowledge and experience, that it was perfectly possible for a successful professional to also commit major crimes. A sociopathic criminal, he said, can be quite functional and successful in normal life, and can seem very straight and normal to those who know him.

b7C

Finally, I just want to add that any inquiry into our suspect should be done carefully, so that nothing gets back to him. We regard him as a potentially dangerous individual and [redacted] would be at risk if he should learn that he was being investigated.

b6
b7C

Again, thank you for your consideration. I look forward to talking with you again.

REPLY CONCERNING MILITARY RECORDS

RE: _____

The reply to the inquiry will be found in the checked item(s). If you write to us again on this subject, please return your original request, this form, and any other form you complete.

- Copies of requested military personnel medical records are attached. We suggest you make an extra copy and guard against loss or damage. We regret if any photocopies may be of poor quality, but they are the best copies obtainable.
- The attached separation document may include the following information: authority for separation, reason for separation, Reenlistment Eligibility Code, and Separation (SPN/SPD) Code. If you require a copy of the separation document that does not contain the above information, you may request a deleted copy from this Center. A seal has been affixed to the enclosed copy to attest to its authenticity.
- Title 32, Part 45 of the Code of Federal Regulations prohibits this Center from providing to third parties copies of separation documents which contain the type and character of discharge, authority and narrative reason for separation, reenlistment eligibility code, and separation program designator/number. If you require a copy of the separation document containing the above information, the veteran must specifically authorize the release to you of an UNDELETED copy of the separation document.
- The Privacy Act of 1974 does not permit the release of a social security number or other personal information to the public without the authorization of the veteran concerned; therefore, we have deleted personal identifying data relating to other persons.
- Since September 1979 the military service departments have not issued individual separation documents for each enlistment period if the person was discharged for immediate reenlistment. Block 18 of the DD Form 214 issued at final separation reflects the full period of continuous active military service.
- The Reenlistment Eligibility (RE) Code issued upon release from active duty on _____ is _____.
- The reason and authority for separation from active duty/discharge on _____ is _____.
- The record of service in the _____ indicates being in a POW status from _____ to _____.
- A discharge certificate is issued only as an original document; thus, there is no file copy from which to make a copy for you. We will obtain an appropriate substitute certificate for a veteran or surviving spouse if you will tell us whether the original was: 1) never received; or (2) lost or destroyed.
- The document you have requested, DD Form 214, Report of Separation, was not used until Jan. 1, 1950. However, a similar form was used at the time the person named above was separated. A copy of it is attached. A seal has been affixed to the enclosed copy to attest to its authenticity.
- When the person named above was separated, it was not the practice to issue a document which served as a report of separation.
- The original report of separation was issued at the time of separation. Another original cannot be issued. The attached copy, however, will serve the same purpose as the original.
- No report of separation was issued, since the person named above had no active service, or less than 90 days of active duty for training.
- The service record of the person named above does not contain a copy of a report of separation, or its equivalent. Therefore, we are instead providing the attached NA Form 13038, Certification of Military Service. This will serve as verification of military service and may be used for any official purpose.
- That portion of your request seeking medals/awards has been referred to the office checked below, which has jurisdiction over the issuance of medals/awards. Any further correspondence on this subject should be addressed to that office. Both offices are at 9700 Page Ave., St. Louis, MO 63132.

 ARPERCEN, Attn: DARP-VSE-A Navy Liaison Office, Room 5409 That portion of your request regarding Air Force or Army Air Corps medals will be answered under separate cover. The medical records requested The documents requested pertaining to discharge have been lent to the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA). Please phone the VA at 1-800-827-1000 for help in obtaining these records, and provide your VA Claim Number. The Department of Defense Privacy Program, 32 CFR 310.30(f), allows for the disclosure of medical records to the individual to whom they pertain. Dear Agent [redacted]

I got the message you left on my answering machine regarding the suspect whose photos I sent you. I appreciate your prompt response.

You said the suspect could not be Cooper as Cooper was not balding. In all probability, you're right about this. Of course, I knew from the composite pictures that Cooper did not appear to be balding, or to be disguised in any way. But I thought that it would be natural for a skyjacker who knew he would be observed at length to disguise himself in some way. In particular, if he was a man who was balding across the top, he would want to wear a hairpiece to conceal this fact. And he would want it to look natural, as some better quality hairpieces can if they are carefully applied. It would just be a matter of careful planning.

Nevertheless, I agree that this possibility is pretty small. And we have no direct evidence tying our suspect to the crime. As you said, it is a matter of conjecture, though the conjecture is based on our suspect's skills and the fact that we have had him under investigation for other crimes. But obviously this doesn't warrant the expenditure of the Bureau's resources in investigating him any further.

Nevertheless, I will enclose with this letter a copy of a DNA profile done on our suspect. If there is a DNA profile done on Cooper, now or in the future, all I ask is that the two be compared. That should take hardly any time or effort. And while it's very unlikely for there to be a match, it's not beyond the realm of possibility. For a minimal effort, there is the possibility of a big payoff.

Again, thanks for your consideration and your timely response.

Sincerely,

b6

REF: My phone conversation with Seattle area duty officer (1-206-262-2000) and fax of Timeline transmitted same day.

ATTN: My total data package -- mostly from the internet.

Agent in charge,

The D.B. Cooper skyjacking case of November 1971, to my knowledge has never been resolved. I believe that this data package, if followed up, may enable that closure. My interest in the case started when I was transferred to Seattle in June of 1972 and the D.B. Cooper sensation was still very much in the news. In addition, the story of the Falcon and the Snowman was released a short time later and I was employed in an environment similar to that of the story. I did not relate the stories at that time.

When I saw the picture (attached) in our local paper of [redacted] it rang a very loud bell in my memory. He was D.B. Cooper as shown in the composit drawing of 1972. I then started the timeline relating [redacted] and Cooper and became more and more convinced that these names were very possibly the same man.

Some questions I have not been able to answer from the internet are:

- o Did [redacted] do any sport parachute jumping in highschool or shortly thereafter?
- o Where was his friend [redacted] in '71 and '72 --They had always worked together.

b6
b7C

[redacted] was paroled from federal prison in [redacted]. I have no data on him since that time. I believe that if this data turns out to be true, [redacted] and maybe [redacted] will disappear during parole along with any money remaining from their skyjacking and espionage activities. [redacted] started taking flying lessons during the 18 months after [redacted]

b6
b7C

I would greatly appreciate knowing the results of your review of this package and, of course, any reward offered for identifying D.B. Cooper.

Sincerely,

FAMOUS COLD CASES: Police nemeses, tabloid fodder

By Davina Willett

Whatever Happened to D.B. Cooper?

On the night before Thanksgiving 1971, a rather nondescript, middle-a-skinned man boarded North West Airlines Flight 305 at around 4:15 p. Portland International Airport. He paid $20 cash for his ticket. En route Seattle, the man, who has come to be known as D.B. Cooper, handed attendant Flo Schaffner a handwritten note.

About four hours later D.B. Cooper pulled off the only successful major劫机 in U.S. history.

D.B. Cooper reclaimed the note he handed to Schaffner, so its exact words are lost in history. But according to Max Gunther, author of D.B. Cooper: Whatever Happened, Schaffner, and the colleague to whom she showed the letter, remember it. It explained that the man had a bomb in his case and that he wanted $200,000 in $20 bills; that he demanded four parachutes, along with money, delivered to him when the plane landed in Seattle; and he said if demands were not met, he would detonate the bomb and blow up the

When the plane landed in Seattle, the airline had (serial numbers already recorded by the FBI) and parachutes waiting. D.B. Cooper released everyone except stewardess Tina Mucklow Larson, and both pilot

He ordered the plane to be refueled and flown to no more than 10,000 feet, agreeing to another stop in Reno, Nevada. He demanded the wing flap and the rear stairs lowered. All measures to keep at a safe speed and easy access for jumping out of the stairs.

D.B. Cooper parachuted out of Northwest Airlines jet with a $200,000 ransom.

The pilots reported that the plane's gauges recorded a sharp bump in pressure at 8:13 p.m., as they flew over Washington. This is when the pilots and the FBI figure Cooper jumped, presumably that his jumping caused the stairwell to snap shut then open affecting the plane's pressure guage. The money, two parachutes and Cooper were missing when the plane landed for refueling in Reno.

Soldiers, police, volunteers and FBI agents searched the area — which the densest forest in the U.S. — for 18 days by foot, planes, boats and helicopters. But not until 1980 was any trace of Cooper found.

in Feb? Maybe Summer of 78?

A little over five thousand dollars of Cooper's spoils were discovered b picnicking with his family along the banks of the Columbia River in so Washington state, on Feb. 10, 1980. Then, in 1995, a woman named J claimed that her husband, Duane Weber, confessed to being D.B. Cooper deathbed after 17 years of marriage. did he and [redacted] know each other

b6
b7C

Ralph Himmelsbach, the FBI agent assigned to the case, remains steadfast belief that Cooper would not have survived — whether he was killed by the powerful turbulence on the way down, or died from a lack of food gear in the forest.

Himmelsbach may refer to him as "a dirty, rotten crook," but D.B. Cooper achieved almost cult status. And just in case he ever does show up, all charges await him in U.S. District Court.

From:

I have been thinking of this for many years. I may have a suspect for you but due to loyalties I have for this man I have not addressed before.

He looks so very much like the sketches that have been circulating since the event. His height, weight, clothing that he wore, matches to a T.

I use to work for this guy. We built aircraft parts. We visited many 727's where he showed me how the rear door worked. He knew all the buttons and mechanisms.

Prior to coming to the Seattle area he worked for McDonald Douglass in the [redacted] He was a paratrooper in the army. He had a [redacted] [redacted] around the same time frame when DB Cooper hijacked the plane. He claims this was caused by [redacted] He was a heavy drinker and smoker.

b6

One way to eliminate or prove him as a suspect is to find the cigarette butts that he left behind and extract DNA from them, if possible. He drinks coffee at the same place and time every day where you could get DNA samples. Then do a background check on him including getting his picture from the Washington State Department of Licensing. You will be amazed at his Gordon likeness.

If interested in talking, please give me a call. I am home during the day.

Confidentiality: YES

Reward to Me: YES (if available)

The Crime

On 11/24/1971, the day before Thanksgiving, a lone White male boarded Northwest Orient flight 305 at Portland, Oregon. At approximately 3:22 p.m., while the flight was en route to Seattle, Washington, he indicated to the stewardess that his briefcase contained a bomb, which would blow up the plane unless his demands were met.

The hijacker demanded $200,000.00 and four parachutes in exchange for the safety of the 36 passengers aboard the plane. When the aircraft landed at Seattle, Northwest Orient Airlines complied with his instructions. After he received the parachutes and money, the hijacker allowed all passengers and two airline stewardesses to deplane.

He then ordered the remaining crew members into the first class section of the aircraft and informed them he desired to fly to Mexico City. The hijacker instructed that the plane proceed in a southerly direction and fly at a low altitude and slow speed, which would enable the rear door of the plane to be opened during the flight.

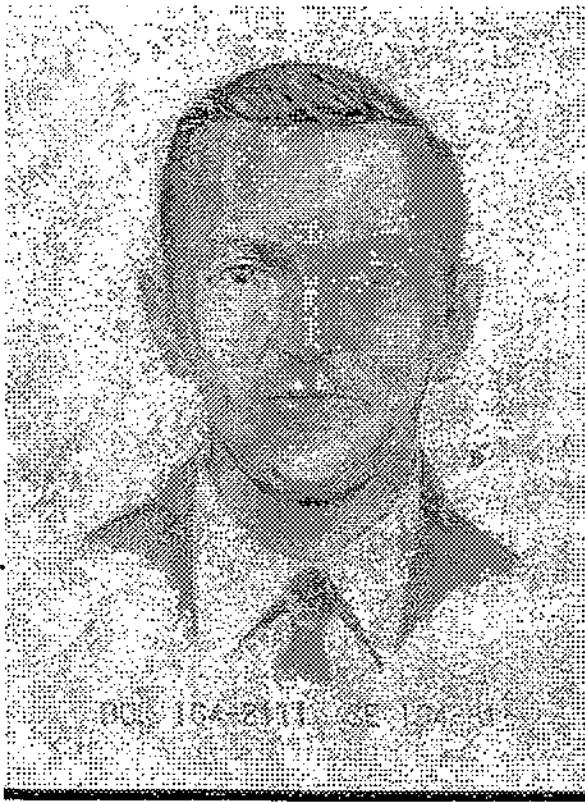

The hijacker apparently bailed out somewhere between Seattle and Reno, Nevada, where the plane landed to refuel. It was determined the hijacker, two parachutes and the ransom money had disappeared when the plane was inspected at Reno.

Original artist's conception drawing of the aircraft hijacker were prepared by the FBI Exhibit Section and are considered a reasonable likeness. The more recent aged composite was prepared to depict what the hijacker might have looked like in 1999.

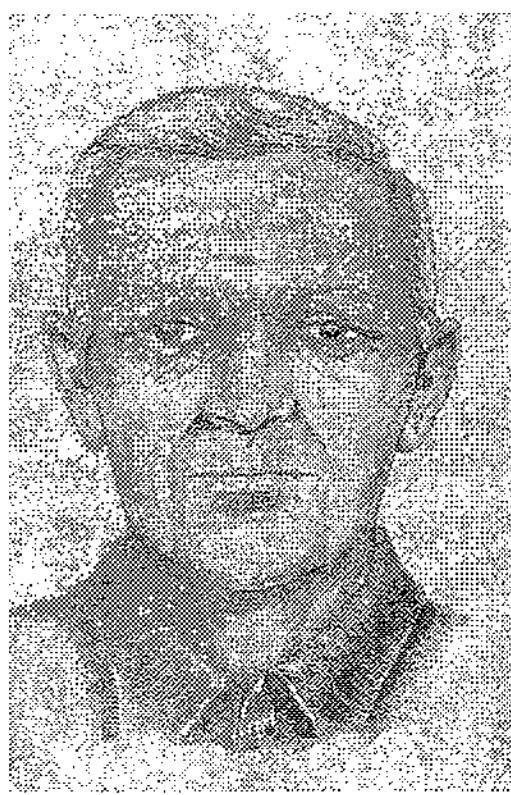

The hijacker was described as follows:

Race:	White
Sex:	Male
Age:	Mid-40s
Height:	Five feet ten inches to six feet
Weight:	170 to 180 pounds
Complexion:	Olive, Latin appearance, medium smooth
Hair:	Dark brown or black, parted on the left, combed back
Eyes:	Possibly brown; during the latter part of the flight, the hijacker put on dark, wrap-around sunglasses with dark rims

Voice: Low, spoke intelligently, no particular accent
Characteristics: Smoked filter-type cigarettes
Wearing Apparel: Black or brown suit; narrow black tie (clip-on type); black rain-type overcoat or dark topcoat; dark briefcase or attache case; carried a brown paper bag 4 X12 X 14 inches; brown shoes
Remarks: Very polite at all times

ORIGINAL MONTAGE

AGED TO 1999

LEADS:

1. TYPICAL - A relative or former friend resembles UNSUB and has had previous parachuting experience. In addition, he had "a lot of money" at about that time and he possibly said he was "D.B. COOPER" while drinking in a bar.

Age differences or height differences between the suspect and UNSUB generally can disprove 95 percent of these leads.

2. NOT TYPICAL - Suspect is dead and told witnesses he was "D.B. COOPER." He also said he lost the money in the jump.

Age and height differences plus location on 11/24/1971 or 11/25/1971 can be useful in processing these suspects.

FNU [redacted] (phonetic) telephoned the FBI switchboard in Seattle on July 20, 2004. He refused to identify himself beyond telling the interviewing agent that his name is [redacted] and that he is [redacted] years old. (Based on his voice he is probably a white male.) He lives in Eugene, Oregon (OR) and his parents recently passed away. [redacted] is unemployed and needs money as soon as possible. He is staying with friends, but is a burden on them because their house is already full with children and grandchildren.

b7C

He seeks a reward for his knowledge about D.B. COOPER'S (COOPER) landing site. He will provide additional information if the FBI will pay him. He will also show the FBI the location of the [redacted] parachute if the FBI will pay for him to travel to Portland, OR. [redacted] already shopped his story, with negative results, to the NATIONAL INQUIRER and other tabloid publications.

b6
b7C

[redacted] claimed to know where COOPER landed, via parachute, after COOPER jumped from the hijacked plane. [redacted] drove to a job site in COUGAR, WA with friends about a week after the hijacking. A friend in the truck said he saw a parachute in a pond. [redacted] returned to the site after work and alone. He saw a parachute sinking into the pond.

b7C

The site is a pond close to Interstate 5, just across the Columbia River. The pond is at the end of a private runway. [redacted] believes COOPER planned to make his escape using the runway. [redacted] returned to the pond two weeks ago and did not see any remnants from the hijacking. He believes clues, including a parachute, money and possibly bones can be found in the pond by FBI divers.

b6

[redacted] does not know the date or even year of the hijacking. He also does not know the amount of money taken or the location of the plane when COOPER jumped.

Synopsis: To set phase II leads for investigation and collection of DNA samples for submission to the Laboratory, DNA 1. This case remains the only unsolved hijacking in the United States, and is commonly referred to as the "D.B. Cooper" investigation. Enclosures: For each receiving office is one case information sheet. This information is also available to be emailed to any RA Agents who do not receive the enclosure.

Details: Over the years, over one thousand possible subjects meriting subfiles have been processed by Seattle with the assistance of virtually every Field Division. Most, opened in the initial stages of the investigation, were quickly eliminated, some required extensive investigation to eliminate, some remained of interest and could not be included or excluded through normal means. To date, the hijacker of Northwest 305, who parachuted from the aircraft with the $200,000 ransom, has not been identified. This case remains the only unresolved airplane hijacking in U.S. history. Although it is very likely that the hijacker did not survive the jump, it remains a possibility. If currently alive, the hijacker would likely be in his mid-70's. As hijacking was a capital offense at the time, DOJ has recently again advised that no statute of limitations exists.

For the information of VCMOS and receiving offices, a recent resubmission of an item connected to the UNSUB has resulted in recovery of male nuclear DNA. This DNA was suitable for entry into CODIS and for identification and elimination. Seattle has identified the below individuals from which a DNA sample is desired to process a comparison.

A review is being conducted in Seattle to identify possible candidates for DNA comparison. It is anticipated that only a very small minority of the original suspect pool will qualify for this DNA project. Phase II of this review involved the completed review of subject subfiles 1-500.

Due to the extensive and counterproductive media coverage that, in some cases, may result from these contacts, all offices are requested to exercise discretion in dealing with these leads. Some of these suspects may have known they were considered a person of interest, others may not. Likewise the families may, or may not be aware. In cases where the suspect is alive, oral swabs should be solicited. In cases where the subject is deceased, all methods to include hair from shavers, brushes, salvia from postage stamps, etc. should be considered. In those cases where recovery of these items are not possible, obtain proper death and burial records. Contact Seattle case agent before asking family members for any exhumation authority. In the event the suspect, and/or family, cannot be located, receiving offices should set out appropriate leads to follow up with an information copy to Seattle.

Obtain samples by one of the following methods, in the following order of priority:

1. Oral swabs from suspect (best)
2. Toothbrush, shaver, brush, comb belonging to suspect, or envelope with saliva on flap or stamp (second best).
3. Oral swabs from both surviving parents (third best).
4. Oral swab from two of suspect's natural children. (fourth best).

To: Criminal Investigative From: Seattle
Re: SE 164A-81-DNA, 07/29/2004

All family or possible suspects contacted should be advised that this is merely another investigative step following advancement in technologies. No mention of the recovery of DNA evidence should be made. Care should be given so persons contacted are not lead to believe that they or their family member are a suspect of great interest in this case. Unless specifically requested in lead, no interviews are needed at this time, other than appropriate FD-302 to document DNA samples. Media discussions should be avoided. Refer any media inquiries without comment to the Seattle Media Coordinator, SA [redacted] [redacted] at [redacted]. Any follow up leads to obtain these samples should be set by receiving offices with a copy to Seattle.

If anyone is uncooperative with this process, advise Seattle.

Phase II unresolved suspects:

Caution - May Be Uncooperative Due to Prior Contact With FBI

Last known address: [redacted] Shelton, Washington
[redacted] (10/2003)

[redacted] was originally identified as a suspect based on information received from two individuals. He resembled UNSUB at the time, has military jump experience, and reportedly discussed committing the "perfect crime" prior to the hijacking. [redacted] was only partially cooperative during his interviews in 1972 and 1977, and uncooperative when contacted in 1979 and ultimately refused to answer further questions or take a polygraph examination. Alibi information he provided concerning his work activities and travel during November 1971 was proven at least partially false. He was last contacted in January 1979 while living in Campbell, California. Following that contact, [redacted] retained an attorney and refused a polygraph. In 1993, [redacted] was again identified as being the UNSUB by an another associate who had viewed an "Unsolved Mysteries" segment about this case. Contact Seattle Case Agent if further details are desired.

Due to the passage of time, it is possible that [redacted] will now cooperate with a DNA sample.

3. Richard Floyd McCoy Jr. (deceased) (SUB 386).

SSN 237-66-3779

CAUTION SUGGESTED

Family may be uncooperative

McCoy was convicted of a copycat hijacking of a United Airlines flight in April, 1972 in which he successfully parachuted from that flight over Utah with $500,000. McCoy was arrested/convicted of that offense and most of the hijack proceeds were recovered. McCoy later escaped from prison and was shot and killed in November, 1974 after drawing a weapon on FBI Agents attempting his arrest in Virginia Beach, Virginia. McCoy never claimed to have been COOPER, and there was significant differences in methodology between the two crimes. Evidence indicated McCoy was in Salt Lake City on 11/25/1971, and had possibly attended class at BYU on 11/24/1971. Some evidence exists that McCoy and his wife actually drove to Las Vegas on 11/24/1971. Although the weight of the evidence points toward the elimination of McCoy, speculation continued. In July, 1972 McCoy allegedly told his Pre-Trial officer in Salt Lake City prior to his receiving a 45 year sentence for the UAL hijacking, that he had done "another one". In light of some contradiction in evidence concerning McCoy, and the possibility that the differences in methodology between the hijacking can be partially explained as a possible natural refinement of methods, a DNA sample is being sought.

It is recognized that McCoy's family may still be uncooperative, and appropriate caution should utilized. During McCoy's trial in 1972, [REDACTED] testified against him. [REDACTED] at the time was [REDACTED] now remarried under the name [REDACTED] [REDACTED] may have assisted MCCOY immediately before his death while a fugitive. Perhaps with the passage of thirty

Subject: Norjak/ Granite Productions request

UNCLASSIFIED
RECORD SE 164A-81

[REDACTED]
b6
b7c

Per your request, I will address each of the 13 items requested by Granite Productions. However, in general, and in the past we have directed most inquiries of this nature to public source information that is everywhere on this case. Much of it is not entirely accurate, but this helps us weed out people who claim first hand knowledge. Many people have viewed such shows as the Granite Productions proposal and used it as a basis to claim their husband/brother/etc. was Dan Cooper. Many people have submitted FOI requests. One FOI lawsuit is pending now. The only exceptions to this strategy in my knowledge was for a two 'mainstream shows (i.e. History Channel) in which we did live interviews. Even in those cases we never commented on the evidence we had, or provided any documents from the case file. The tone was mainly 'Here is the crime, here is the artist conception of the subject, the FBI still has an open case and will not stop looking to resolve this matter, etc". These interviews were done at the express request of FBIHQ due to the national exposure possibilities. We agreed only as it could benefit the case.

I believe we must treat this as any other pending FBI investigation with regard to release of information.

With regard to the specific requests from Granite Productions:

1. Flight Data from FAA and other sources concerning flight path: I know of no instance in which this was provided or discussed with anyone outside of LE. Suggest referring them to public reported sources.
2. Archive film footage of an experiment with the NW 727 after the hijacking. This was provided to Unsolved Mysteries/History Channel, a decision expressly made by SAC Mandigo due to the credible nature of the production and request from FBIHQ, an is also not evidence. I see no harm to the case to providing this tape, other than the precedent set and us having to provide another tape to everyone who claims news affiliation, with no benefit to the case or FBI. We are not providing the tape under pending FOI requests.
3. Map and area searched by FBI. This should not be provided and has not been provided to my knowledge.
4. "Psychological Profiling" conducted by the FBI. Information of this sort has not been discussed. The photo and aged composite that I had done in 1998 can be provided.
5. Copy of FBI wanted poster. Refer them to public sources. There was an informational flyer sent out to hunters, and another to LE, 30-plus years ago.
6. Details about the discovery of the 727 aft stairs placard: Refer them to public sources. This has been reported in those sources.
7. Copy of document listing serial numbers of ransom bills. All the serial numbers were published in either the Seattle Times or PI at the time. No copies of this document (or an other from the case file should be provided). Unsolved Mysteries asked for this and was also turned down.
8. FBI photographs of ransom money found at Tina's Bar near Vancouver in the early 1980's. The money found in February 1980 at TENA BAR (Not TINA's Bar) was photographed by news media and appeared in the paper at the time. Refer them to public sources.

9. FBI photographs of search of Tena Bar. Press photos of the search appeared at the time. We should not release any photos produced by the FBI.

10. Information about the condition of money that was found compared to the how the money had been packaged when provided to COOPER. Details of the money as presented to COOPER contain useful holdback details which should not be discussed. We can tell them that the serial numbers of the found money matched the batch of bills given to COOPER during the hijacking.

11. Copy of the geologist report submitted to the FBI concerning the possible point of origin of the money found at Tena Bar. This was a report commissioned by the FBI and is evidence. It should not be provided.

12. Documents pertaining to the investigation of Richard McCoy. McCoy was a subject of a Salt Lake FBI case. Information determined about McCoy cannot be provided by Seattle. McCoy's Salt Lake case is particularly sensitive as he was later shot by the FBI after having drawing a gun while being arrested for prison escape and Bank Robbery. Recent attempts by the FBI Salt Lake have been made (at Seattle's request) to get cooperation of family members.

13. Information about physical evidence recovered from NW 305. The FBI never provides information about physical evidence recovered during a criminal pending investigation.

Please bear in mind that all of the above items have been sought repeatedly during a variety of unsuccessful FOI requests. I don't think we can treat Granite Productions any differently than these requestors, especially since there is no benefit to the case to do so. Otherwise a bad precedent would be set, both for this case and for other old pending major FBI investigations.

b7c

Enclosures: A case information sheet is enclosed. A copy of the FD-71 dated 07/06/2006 taken by the Tacoma RA is also attached.

Details: The hijacker of Northwest 305, who parachuted from the aircraft with $200,000 ransom, has not been identified. This case remains the only unresolved airplane hijacking in U.S. history. Although it is likely that the hijacker did not survive the jump, it remains a possibility. If currently alive, the hijacker would be in his mid-70's. Hijacking was a capital offense at the time and DOJ recently advised that no statute of limitations exists.

Due to the extensive and counterproductive media coverage that, in some cases, may result from contacts with witnesses, all offices are requested to exercise discretion in dealing with leads.

Tacoma should contact [redacted]

Puyallup, Washington, driver's license number [REDACTED] date of birth [REDACTED] was interviewed at the FBI office, 1145 Broadway, Suite 330 Tacoma, Washington. Also present were [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Tacoma, Washington, date of birth [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] Puyallup, Washington, date of birth [REDACTED] [REDACTED] provided the following information:

[REDACTED] purchased a small plane in 1977, that was located at the Pierce County Airport. The plane was located near a different plane owned by BARBARA DAYTON (DAYTON). [REDACTED] and DAYTON became friends and DAYTON would visit the [REDACTED] residence frequently. After DAYTON became comfortable with the [REDACTED] she told them her secret. DAYTON had undergone sex reassignment surgery in 1969 at the University of Washington. Her given name was ROBERT DAYTON, date of birth 05/10/1926. DAYTON was born in Florida. Her parents moved her and [REDACTED] to Long Beach, California, when she was young. While she was still a male, she had been in the Army and the Merchant Marines and had traveled around the world. DAYTON was a proficient pilot and had learned how to parachute from taking a class.

Throughout their friendship, DAYTON had told all kinds of "stories", that the [REDACTED] always thought were made up because of the unusual nature of them. The story of DB COOPER was a topic of many conversations around the airport. Whenever someone called COOPER an idiot or said that he was dead from the jump, DAYTON would become very defensive. Once in 1979, [REDACTED] joked that DAYTON was COOPER in front of other people. DAYTON became very angry and told [REDACTED] not to ever say that again. DAYTON then claimed to be COOPER. DAYTON would tell a lot of details about the hijacking, including wind speed, location of the jump, wing flap location and other very precise items. DAYTON told them that she had jumped south of Portland, Oregon, near Woodburn, Oregon. DAYTON stated that she had flown her plane over the route a number of times to check out the landing locations.

DAYTON said that she did not do it for the money. DAYTON had a hard life because of her sexual identity issues, so it was her way of getting back at the world. DAYTON was also upset that she could not be a commercial pilot and thought the FAA was too harsh on private pilots. DAYTON stated that she planned the idea while spending time in the hospital bed after one of her many surgeries. DAYTON claimed that she had put the money in a cistern on a farm near Woodburn. DAYTON had hidden a change of clothes near the farm before the jump. After the jump, DAYTON put women's clothes on, walked to Woodburn, and took a bus to Portland where her car was located.

DAYTON thought that the statute of limitations would be up around that time of her telling the story, so she felt comfortable talking about the story. However, once she found out that the statute of limitations were extended in around 1980, DAYTON told the [redacted] that she had made the story up, that it was all a "dream". They did not talk about the story much after that. The [redacted] stayed in touch with DAYTON, until around 1997, when she moved to Nevada. DAYTON had a relationship with a man, and the man had passed away. The [redacted] contacted her again after finding her address on the Internet in 2000. DAYTON passed away in 2002.

The [redacted] began researching DAYTON's life after she died. The [redacted] are convinced that DAYTON had told them the truth regarding being COOPER. [redacted] had driven to the exact farm that DAYTON had described, and saw the cistern where the money had been hidden. [redacted] did not try and verify that the money was still there, because it was a private farm. The [redacted] put together a binder with their research. In addition, they claim to have a hair brush and some sealed envelopes from DAYTON that should contain her DNA. They will deliver those items to the FBI in the future.

This is a long shot possibility so I expect that any investigation will be done as discreetly as possible. An investigation of his work record would help to rule him out as a suspect if he was at work when the high jacking went down or had not taken any vacation then. He may have left the job at Rocky Flats before the high jacking but I just do not remember anymore.

Since then the Rocky Flats plant has been completely dismantled and the buildings all torn down and disposed of at a contaminated land fill. Dow Chemical Company was the prime contractor at the time so it would be necessary to check with their main office in Midland Michigan as they no longer have an office in Colorado.

About the time of D.B.Cooper there was a young man who worked with us at Rocky Flats nuclear plant between Golden and Boulder Colorado. He was working in the engineering office and was about 25 years old. His last name was [redacted] but I do not remember the first name. It should be easy enough to get the first name from Dow Chemical Company records.

b7C

One day he showed us a photo of his wife, all decked out in those underwear type outfits they wear in Karate classes, standing next to the instructor. She ran off with the instructor and [redacted] went bonkers. As I remember he was out on Colfax in Denver running across the street in heavy traffic. There may be a police report of that incident in either the Denver or Lakewood police offices depending on how far West it was on Colfax.

He had recently finished a class on sky diving and gave us some demonstrations on how much time you had to open your reserve chute in case the main chute did not open. He had also taken up with some girl who I believe was a daughter of a professor at the college in Boulder.

His behavior was flaky after his wife left him that way. I remember him standing on top of a drafting board and using an old ink well type pen to drop ink on a sheet of paper to see if he could hit a certain spot. That is not the kind of thing one would expect of a young engineering graduate. He did not seem to care if he got a poor report concerning his work activities.

DB Cooper-21941

I can not remember his first name but his last name was [redacted] All I remember about a description was that he was Dark haired and not exceptionally differing in weight or height than average. I would say he was about 5-10 to 6-0 feet tall.

Sincerely: [redacted]

Beloit, WI [redacted]

PS: I used to think [redacted] or D.B.Cooper.

DB Cooper-21943

FBI again asks: Who was D.B. Cooper?

The agency hopes someone will remember 'that odd uncle' or provide other information to identify the skyjacker.

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — The FBI is making a new stab at identifying mysterious skyjacker Dan Cooper, releasing new details that it hopes will jog someone's memory about the man who bailed out of an airliner in 1971 and vanished.

The man calling himself Dan Cooper, also known as D.B. Cooper, boarded a Northwest flight in Portland for a flight to Seattle on the night of Nov. 24, 1971, and commandeered the plane, claiming he had dynamite.

In Seattle, he demanded and got $200,000 and four parachutes and demanded to be flown to Mexico. Somewhere over southwestern Washington, he jumped out the plane's tail exit with two of the chutes.

On Monday, the FBI released drawings that it said probably are close to what Cooper looked like, along with a map of areas where Cooper might have landed.

"Who was Cooper? Did he survive the jump? We're providing new information and pictures and asking for your help in solving the case," the FBI said in a statement.

The FBI said that while Cooper was originally thought to have been an experienced jumper, it has since concluded that was wrong and that he almost certainly didn't survive the jump in the dark and rain. He hadn't specified a route for the plane to fly and had no way of knowing where he was when he went out the exit.

"Diving into the wilderness, without a plan, without the right equipment, in such terrible conditions, he probably never even got his chute open," Seattle-based agent Larry Carr said.

Several people have claimed to be Cooper over the years but were dismissed on the basis of physical descriptions, parachuting experience and, later, by DNA evidence recovered in 2001 from the cheap tie the skyjacker left on the plane.

In 1980, a boy walking near the Columbia River found $5,800 of the stolen money, in tattered $20 bills. "Maybe a hydrologist can use the latest technology to trace the $5,800 in ransom money found in 1980 to where Cooper landed upstream," Carr said. "Or maybe someone just remembers that odd uncle."

"Family" Wins Big Z Star Meet

by Jerry Tyson
with photos by the Author

The first big star meet to be held outside of California took place November 29 and 30, 1969 at Zephyrhills, Florida. Three ten-man teams competed and the "Family," from Hinckley, Illinois, were the winners. The meet practically never got off the ground. Originally scheduled for the Friday and Saturday of Thanksgiving Day weekend, it suffered from that rarity in Florida, a stalled front smack on top of Zephyrhills airport that produced the following aerological nonsense: Thursday, November 27, low clouds, wind, rain 5500' max; Friday, November 28, same soup plus more rain; Saturday, November 29, low clouds in the morning, chill wind but a promise of a break at noon. It did break at noon and the meet got rolling.

The Teams

It's hard to find a place in the U.S. that's farther away from most any place else than Zephyrhills. It's even harder to get jumpers to go such great distances for a meet. The odds against getting 10 in a group to ante up the necessary travel, entry fee, and expense money are phenomenal. In sponsoring such a meet to further large star relative work, Jeff Searles took an enormous chance on losing his shirt. Two months before the meet he had verbal promises of as many as five entries for the 10-man event plus several more for the five-man event. The five-man event never got off the ground and three teams showed for the 10-man: the "Family" from Hinckley, Ill., a team from Taft, California and a pick-up team from the Tampa-Zephyrhills area. Neither the "Family" nor Taft arrived with a full quota, the "Family" picking up three jumpers on the spot and Taft picking up two.

The Aircraft

"Big Z" is one of the best places in the U.S. to have a star meet. In regard to aircraft support it is the best place. On hand for the meet, should they be needed, were the following: a DC-3, a C-47, a Lockheed Electra (like an overgrown Twin Beech), 2 Cessna 196's, and a Cessna 182. All of these aircraft, loaded and flying formation, could deposit 96 jumpers into the air over Z-hills. I personally wouldn't want to be anywhere near such a mess but you get the idea — there are a lot of jump platforms at the place.

For the 10-man event a DC-3 was used. It accommodated three 10-man teams at a time plus assorted photographers, observers, hangers-on, et al. Let's lay to rest right here the fallacy that you can't use a DC-3 or a C-47 for RW. It's simply not true. All it takes is know how and a nice hand at the controls. Both the pilot, Bill Griffin, and the co-pilot, Bob Porter, who owned the plane, have several hundred hours each flying jumpers in this type aircraft.

Except for the first round, which the judges didn't see because of intermittent clouds, we were climbing at 1,000 fpm with 35 passengers in the plane and reaching 13,500 feet in 18 to 20 minutes, using 142 gallons an hour. At $7.00 a head it beats flying freight. The exits averaged seven seconds per team and our speed on jump run was 75-80 knots. During the third round they had it down to 70 knots indicated. You say that's not possible? It is and here's how: on jump run the wheels are lowered, quarter flaps are extended and some power is reduced on the left engine. The aircraft has a tendency to yaw in this attitude but any experienced pilot can compensate. Very little altitude is lost and at 13,500 who cares? It was a good plane to jump from. You can stand up, stretch, chant exhortational mantras, harass the other teams, in short, really get yourself psyched up for some inspired wrist-breaking.

The FAA On Seatbelts

It is certainly recognized that a person experiencing an inadvertent parachute opening while secured by a safety belt would suffer serious or possibly fatal injury. On the other hand, we have evidence to show that accidents have been caused by jump occupants who were not wearing their safety belts. The Southern Region recently investigated two such accidents. The pilot in each case was unable to maintain control of the jump aircraft because the parachutists on board were not wearing their safety belts. What should have been nothing more than two minor incidents resulted in serious accidents through noncompliance with Federal Aviation Regulation (FAR) 91.14.

It is our feeling that safety would suffer far more by allowing parachutists to ignore this rule than would be the case of requiring them to have their safety belts fastened during takeoff and landing. The chances of a pilot having to abort a takeoff run or make an emergency stop during landing will, I think, be greater than inadvertent parachute openings during takeoff and landing.

FAR 91.14 applies only during takeoff and landing. The rule does not prohibit unfastening safety belts after a takeoff has been completed; however, I would sincerely hope that jump aircraft pilots would request that safety belts be kept fastened until an altitude has been attained which would at least give the victim of an inadvertent parachute opening a fighting chance for survival.

Your interest in aviation safety is greatly appreciated and we will further explore this problem with the United States Parachute Association and others that we have contact with. It is hoped that you will continue to assist us in our efforts to keep the Federal Aviation Regulations realistic and effective.

C, identified above, contacted the Seattle FBI and provided the following information:

C's children, while out playing on his three-acre property, uncovered a buried parachute. C described it as a white military-style. When asked why C thought the parachute was a military style, C answered, "from watching tv." C indicated his children had cut the strings off the parachute and brought it to his driveway. C stated the parachute is deteriorated and in bad shape. C has owned the property for approximately eight to nine years and further, and this property is directly under the flight path.

DEPUTY ASSISTANT DIRECTOR'S NOTE

UNSUB,
aka DAN COOPER;
NORJAK;
CAA - HIJACKING;
OO: SEATTLE;
SE 164A-81 (PENDING) ~ 9477

Background:

On 11/24/1971, Dan Cooper hijacked a Northwest Orient Airlines flight, from Portland, Oregon, to Seattle, Washington, by claiming he had a bomb. Cooper demanded four parachutes and $200,000. The hijacker eventually jumped from the back of the plane with a parachute and the ransom money, somewhere between Seattle and Reno, Nevada. Although it is likely the hijacker did not survive the jump, if living, the hijacker would likely be in his mid to late 70's. The FBI Investigation, dubbed "NORJAK", for Northwest hijacking, has totaled over 1000 interviews, tracked leads involving all FBI Field Offices, and considered more than 800 suspects. In 1980, a young boy found approximately $5,800 in decaying $20 bills, that matched the ransom money serial numbers.

Recent Events:

Various agents have been assigned over the years to manage the leads that continue to come in regarding the investigation and to manage the DNA Project. In 2004, a re-submission of evidence resulted in the recovery of male nuclear DNA and was entered into CODIS for future identification and elimination of suspects. The DNA Project identified possible candidates for DNA comparison and individuals from which a DNA sample should be obtained. In 2006, the Laboratory Division determined the degraded DNA sample could only be used to exclude individuals as possible donors. To date, only a few of the original suspect pool have been included in the DNA Project for comparison with negatives.

In recognition of the 35th anniversary of the hijacking (November 2008), the Seattle Division granted limited media access to various portions of the case files. Numerous e-mails were received in response, but nothing substantive until early March, when the Seattle Division was contacted by [REDACTED] of Amboy, WA. [REDACTED] children recovered a parachute from an area on his property where [REDACTED] was grading the property with a tractor. Apparently [REDACTED] unearthed the parachute without his knowledge and his children discovered it while playing in the area. The children recovered the parachute by cutting the chute from the canopy lines, which were deeply embedded in the ground. [REDACTED] attempted to recover the remaining portions of the parachute but his children were unable to locate the original area where the parachute was discovered. Based on comparative analysis of the location of the parachute with Cooper's probable jump zone, the discovery is plausible. The parachute is currently being analyzed and reviewed by subject matter experts to determine if the parachute is consistent with the age and type known to have been used by Cooper. This will determine if further investigation is warranted. If the preliminary investigation confirms the parachute is related, a determination will be made for further investigation at the recovery site.

Russ Gunby

Russ Gunby joined the US Army in 1940 and made his first jump in 1944 after trying for 3 years to get accepted into jump school. At the time, US Army regulations forbade soldiers from jumping outside of military operations jumps. Gunby disliked this rule and worked to get it changed. He did unofficial jumps, breaking the rules, by using surplus equipment and hiring a pilot for $50. He also founded the parachute club at Ft Ord, CA.

Gunby wrote Army Regulation 9519 in 1956. This regulation actively encouraged sport parachuting. He went around to many Army bases encouraging the establishment of clubs. Much to his dismay, he received a very cool reception to these ideas.

Gunby would ask a base Colonel to join the local club. The Colonel would ask, "Why?" Gunby would say "Why not, you've been jumping for years?" The Colonel would then reply, "How much will you pay me?".

Gunby said, "I was dumbfounded. For the first time in my life I found out there were Army paratroopers who didn't like to jump. That really shocked me. I was going around with my new regulations saying, "Hey look here, we can all jump." and everybody was saying, "You're nuts, man".

After AR 9519 was official, surplus equipment was made available. The big problem that surface was that anyone could claim to be a parachuting instructor. This lead to injuries and fatalities because of inadequate training procedures.

This situation prompted Gunby to hitchhike to the PCA Board meeting in NY in 1959. He asked about proposed safety regulations. He was voted Secretary/Treasurer by the end of that meeting.

Russ Gunby, C-350, was the first skydiving instructor in the US and conducted the first Instructor's course in 1959 in Phoenix, AZ. He also established the Area Safety Officer (now S&TA) and the Conference (now Region) method of representation.

Brothers in Arms: True Stories of the 101st Airborne Division (Boxed Set)

Understanding the Skydive by Erik Johnson

Parachuting: The Skydiver's Handbook

Russ Gunby wrote a book called "Sport Parachuting - a basic handbook of sport parachuting" in 1960 when at age 38 while still in the Army. He mortgaged his home to produce the first printing. Later printings were underwritten by Jeppesen.

More than 80,000 copies were sold. Gunby says of "Sport Parachuting" ... "In the beginning the book filled the void in the absence of knowledgeable instructors. Today it's used to augment and reinforce student instruction, and that's good. It has done much more than I originally anticipated."

His book was a cornerstone in writing down methodologies and procedures for the safe training of jumpers.

Gunby's Army career included enlisting as a private, infantry combat leader, combat intelligence officer. He attained the rank of Major in 20 years of service. Gunby resigned from the Army in Dec. 1960 to become full time Executive Director of PCA. He had a salary of about $2000 per year.

PCA was headquartered in Mt. Kisco, NY and Gunby lived in Monterey, CA. He stipulated that PCA had to be run from Monterey in order for him to accept the position of Executive Director.

PCA headquarters was relocated to Monterey, CA in 1960. PCA membership was 859. Gunby served as Executive Director from 1958 (?? sources conflict) to 1963.

In 1964, Gunby ran for PCA President and relinquished the Executive Director position. Also in 1964, Parachute Club of America (PCA) was changed to United States Parachute Association (USPA) because the word club did not properly express the stature of the organization. Membership was over 10,000.

USPA presented Gunby with its Achievement Award in 1977. The inscription reads: "A founding spirit who saw the future when others doubted. As author, Executive Director and PCA President, he gave countless hours to build the early framework of our sport."

Gunby was awarded PEIA's (former name of PIA) first Achievement Award in 1981. Don Beck, PEIA Secretary said, "When the Parachute Equipment Industry Association first decided to create an Achievement Award, the principle criterion was a major contribution to the sport parachute field, but most importantly, it had to withstand the test of time. Without question Russ Gunby's contributions meet that criterion. His book, Sport Parachuting, has been used as THE training manual for a whole generation of skydivers and those training methods are still being used. PEIA is proud to present this award to an outstanding man in the field of parachuting safety."

Gunby battled lung cancer and actually wanted to make a one-lung jump in 1982. Gunby spent the last years of his life in Tahlequah, OK. He died April 8, 1982 from lung cancer.

[redacted] parachute on the lawn [redacted]. During the interaction, the conversation turned to the hijacking subject. [redacted] wondered out loud about who might be the infamous criminal. [redacted] and told him if he swore never to tell [redacted] he would tell him a secret. [redacted] never to reveal the secret to [redacted] or to anyone else as long as [redacted] were alive.
(Note: [redacted] passed away last year)

b7C

[redacted] he was D.B. Cooper. [redacted] was skeptical and asked [redacted] where the money was if he was the real hijacker. Russell stated that he lost the money during the jump. Russell had tied a bag of money to the parachute he was wearing. The impact of the parachute opening caused the bag to snap loose. Russell spent the next two days looking for the money bag, but abandoned his efforts fearing law enforcement authorities would eventually discover his location.

b7C

A review of Russell's military records provided by [redacted] revealed that Russell was a member of the 82nd Airborne Division of the United States Army. [redacted] could not recall the specific date, but believed Russell died over 20 years ago in Oklahoma. Online records search by the writer discovered that Russell A. Gunby died on April 8, 1982 in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

b6
b7C

Military records further identified Russell as having a date of birth of October 1, 1922 and place of birth Englewood, Colorado. Russell served in the United States Army from 1940 to 1960.

Public records checks reveal that Russell authored the Sport Parachuting Handbook circa 1960. His place in the sport of parachuting is well documented online.

Russell's most prominent mention is in Parachutehistory.com. An article identifies him as the recipient of the 1977 United States Parachute Association (USPA) Achievement Award. Russell is believed to have played a very prominent role in the establishment of the Parachute Club of America (PCA), which preceded the USPA. Also, he was identified in the article as the first skydiving instructor in the U.S.

Sirs,

I knew from the start that I wouldn't be caught.

I didn't rob Northwest Orient because I thought it would be romantic, heroic or any of the other euphemisms that seem to attach themselves to situations of high risk.

I'm no modern day Robin Hood. Unfortunately do have only 14 months to live.

My life has been one of hate, turmoil, hunger and more hate, this seemed to be the fastest and most profitable way to gain a few fast grains of peace of mind.

I don't blame people for hating me for what I've done nor do I blame anybody for wanting me to be caught and punished, though this can never happen.

Here are some (not all) of the things working against the authorities:

I'm not a boasting man
I left no fingerprints
I wore a tcupee
I wore putty make-up

They could add or subtract from the composite a hundred times and not come up with an accurate description; and we both know it.

I've come and gone on several airline flights already and am not holed up in some obscure backwoods town. Neither am I a psycho-pathic killer. As a matter of fact I've never even received a speeding ticket.

Thank you for your attention.

SUMMERPOWER!

CANADA GIVES YOUTH ITS HEAD—AND BREAD

On their summer jobs: Les Ballets Modernes du Québec (above), and the crew from Ontario's Farm Lab Theatre (right), who are turning an old farm into a children's theater workshop.

BY IRA MOTHNER
LOOK SENIOR EDITOR

Each summer when school lets out and turns youth loose on the land, there is less for them to do and less they find worth doing. It figures that young people will start to slip out on a society that has so little use for them. So the government of Canada has taken step one toward easing their annual angst.

Canada is underwriting underground newspapers, paying for ventures called Gorilla [sic] Radio and The Kundalini Yoga Workshop, but mostly for day camps, wilderness camps, drug-crisis services, drop-in centers, dropout centers, programs for welfare rights and sea gull control, dental hygiene and sex information, and bankrolling troupes of actors, dancers, marionettes and tumblers.

To some nervous citizens, "Opportunities for Youth," linchpin of the summer youth program, seems a scheme to subsidize radicals or slip hush money to the vocally abrasive young. But a good many students are happily working for the first time within a system they doubted had elbow-room for the likes of them.

The idea was to get kids—high school, college and graduate students—off the streets and out of everybody's hair without them slopping over into the job market. Canada's unemployment figures have been sprinting a shade ahead of ours, and even when the economy is blooming, there are never enough summer jobs in Canada, any more than there are in the U.S. Neither country has much need for young hands these days, so more youngsters stay on in school longer. Many need summer pay to pick up part of their educational tab. But there are fewer tables to wait on, bells to hop or lives to save for the seasonal amateur.

Both the Canadian Government and ours take on student summer help. But young sunshine bureaucrats pick up only part of the slack. The emphasis on our side of the border is now busy-work for the poor and potentially troublesome. Most jobs are with the Neighborhood Youth Corps, a poverty program that gives work experience to youngsters from families below the poverty line.

Canada hasn't followed our lead. Canadians haven't had our summer troubles and don't like means-tested benefits (where you've got to prove you're poor). Their new summer plan is pegged to what Ottawa officials call "changing life styles of kids." It includes travel, language training (to encourage bilingualism) and Opportunities for Youth, work young people plan and run themselves. Government types agree that "the kids want to do a lot of things that have to be done out in society and aren't going to be done by business or government."
